Q: How is the hydrogen, oxygen, and fluorine are replaced in an ozone molecule? The way I think this would work is that the hydrogen atoms would attach to the O₂ and then the F₂ would attach to the other two O atoms. I don't quite have the reaction formula but I think the resulting structure would be $\text{O}_3\text{-F} + \text{H}_2\text{O} + \text{H} + \text{F}$. Then there would be 2 hydrogens and fluorine attached to the two oxygen atoms. Then the fluorine would detach and move away from oxygen atoms and would attach itself to the oxygen atom. So the final structure would be $\text{O}_4\text{-H} + \text{F-H-O-H-F}$. The resulting structure would be O_3F_2 instead of O_4F . Is this how it works?

A: I am not an expert, but a chemistry teacher can confirm I am right. The way I think this would work is that the hydrogen atoms would attach to the O₂ and then the F₂ would attach to the other two O atoms. You are almost right. If we look at the structure of ozone molecule, we see it consists of four oxygen atoms and we are told that they are hydroxylated and each hydroxylated atom is itself a -O-H functional group. Thus, if we take two oxygen atoms, we will get 2-O-H-O-H and this is a -O-OH functional group. Now, if we take this functional group and replace this hydrogen atom with a fluorine atom we will get 2-F
