Age-dependence of drug sensitivity in rat lymphocytes infected in vitro with lymphotropic oncornaviruses. The susceptibility to selected chemotherapeutic agents and capacity to form c-myc mRNA and p16INK4 mRNA were studied in lymphocytes of normal and old rats infected with lymphotropic oncornaviruses. In parallel control groups were maintained uninfected or treated with negative viruses. No differences in sensitivity to mitomycin C (MMC), actinomycin D and vincristine (VCR), or p16INK4 mRNA levels were found. An increase in the capacity to form c-myc mRNA in response to phytohemagglutinin (PHA) and concanavalin A (Con A) was observed in lymphocytes of mature but not old rats. In old rats the capacity to form c-myc mRNA was similar to that of uninfected rats. These results suggest that the ability to synthesize c-myc mRNA in response to PHA and Con A in lymphocytes of old rats is impaired.[Radiotherapy as a risk factor for breast cancer in patients with negative mammography]. The aim of this study was to compare the results in patients with negative mammograms and irradiated and non-irradiated mammography. The records of 407 patients with mammographically normal breast tumors, with or without evidence of metastatic lesions, were reviewed and compared with those of the group of women with positive mammograms. The following variables were evaluated: age at the time of diagnosis, tumor size, number of dissected lymph nodes, histological and nuclear grade, status of hormonal receptors and LVI, presence of metastatic lymph nodes, presence of extramammary metastatic spread, site of primary tumor, type of f678ea9f9e
